

Why can't you make other courses give students practical skills to get licences upon graduation without having to be trained by technicians once they get jobs?

We have embarked on assessing our programmes to determine how well they respond to market, industry, societal and government needs. Additionally, we are interrogating the depth of coverage in so far as delivery of curricula, inculcation of practical skills and integration of industry in our teaching and research are concerned.